Eleventh Annual Symposium Advances in Cardiovascular Disease

There have been dramatic advances in the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular diseases in the past decade. Major strides in both diagnostic and therapeutic modalities are made every few years. Cardiology in particular has benefited from technological advances.

This program, designed for the primary care physician, assesses and clearly describes these technological developments so that the physician may use them in day-to-day clinical practice.

Furthermore, the program is designed to encourage interaction with the audience so that the practical application of the information can be reinforced.

Open to graduates of approved medical schools.

As an organization accredited for continuing medical education, the UCLA Department of Health Sciences, UCLA Extension, certifies that this continuing medical education activity meets the criteria for 6 credit hours of Category I of the Physician's Recognition Award of the American Medical Association and the California Medical Association Certificate.
